HUNTING FOR PRECIOUS STONES YANGON, MYANMAR

Kipling called it his "beautiful winking wonder". Encased in solid gold, the upper reaches of Yangon's Shwedagon Pagoda are embedded in literally thousands of diamonds and precious gems, not including its 76-carat diamond orb. It's no wonder that Myanmar – or its more romantic moniker, Burma – has earned its placing among the most desired destinations for precious gemstones.

Elegance surpassed, quality unmatched, today some of the finest names in the jewelry trade like Tiffany, Cartier, Van Cleef & Arpels, Bulgari ... as well as renowned gem dealers like Jean Rosenthal and Ian Roberts of Benjamin Warwick, London have been linked to Burmese gem stones.

Discover the treasures of Myanmar from 17,500 Enrich Miles for a round-trip ticket.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA: OF LEOPARDS AND FINE WINE.

It was once considered the greatest wine regions in the world. With roots dating as far back as 1659. Today the Cape wine industry is overflowing from the sweet taste of success that's enjoyed the world over.

The reason behind its staggering success is not only due to its ideal terroir and climate. But also its viticulturists' determination to experiment and produce some of the finest, most unique varieties that have, for centuries, tantalized the palates of wine connoisseurs everywhere. Although this alone is enough to lure some of the most influential wine aficionados to its vineyards, there's more to the Cape experience than the harvest. Especially when the winery itself has dedicated its efforts to conserving the wildlife in the environment.

Although the Cape area provides the perfect environment for wine agriculture, the magnificence of its table mountain sandstone cliffs is also home to one of the most elusive animals on earth, the Cape leopard. Facing the wrath of extinction, some of the Cape wine growers have dedicated a trust to saving and conserving the Cape leopard. Today, visitors may also opt for a tour of the sanctuary and welcome a photo opportunity with these fascinating felines.

Much like pairing a beautiful wine selection with one of the most elegant animals on earth, the resulting experience is nothing short of spectacular.

Experience your own Cape Town adventure by redeeming a round-trip ticket from as low as 42,000 Enrich Miles.
